
Six things change
when the model updates.

1. The prompt that used to work

Wording tuned to the old model comes back adjacent, and the rework is unlogged.

2. The shape of the output

Your template expects headings and a table.
It opens with preamble instead.

3. What it refuses

A polite no on one document type, and the person quietly stops using it there.

4. How much it holds

The long spec that came back complete starts missing a clause in the middle.

5. The test you ran once

Filed at purchase, it describes a model that is no longer running.

6. You

Whoever answers when the output is wrong owns noticing that it changed.
